LONDON, Dec. 22—The Daily Chronicle reports the capture of Varra, Bulgaria's chief Black Sea port, by the Russians, It says the bombardment of the Russians silenced the Bulgarian guas and laid the town in ruins, the garrison suffering

Their Christmas Turkey

Patiently enough the family had endured Frant Framely's fade until he became a vegetarian. An overindulgence in turkey at the Thankselving feast had been followed by fasting, repentance and the adoption of the vegetarian cult. Steaks gave place to sailed and lamb to leatth, wherefore the spare pennies of the Frantely younsters were invested in ham saidwiches and smoked best

It had been had encount when Framely had accided the therough mustication fad and the entire family had solemply chewed its food to the loud click of the mutronome. It had been worse when all hands slept in a tent in the back yard because Framely had a cold and feared consumption, but even with an approved venetration klichen, within half a mile it was difficult to give variety to the mean with only vegetable as a foundation.

The younger Franch's refused to regard nut rasout at it substitutes for their mother's awary stews, and the hounglable sout of Mrs. Framely was tried by the exastic excesses of those who were invited to dinner. The pose little woman considered it necessary to explain that they were now vegetarians, and so anticipatory smiles faded from expectant faces as the owners thereof mentioned transparent previous engagements suddily recalled.

Finally she pleaded with her husband for a turkey for Christmas, to his great horror.

"Just for one only," he repeated after het. "My dear, would you plead with me to feed my innocent children on a diet of poisons for "Just one day?" No. I have ordered a beautiful mock turkey from the vesetatina littchen. They assure me that it tastes exactly like the bird, and it is modeful into the same shape. The children will not know, not shape the children will not know.

"But they can't eat their dinner with their eyes shut," protested Mrs. Framely feebly. Her husband regarded her with mild sorrow.

"If only they might eat with their eyes truly open, he tamented, "open to the danger that lurks within the dead flesh they would stuff their stomachs with. Some day they will thank me for saving them from the evils and miseries of flesh eating."

Grandmother was on the maternal side, and Mrs. Colford's intolorance of her son-in-law's flots was an ever ready subjet for serimenious discussion.

To clap the climax, the elder Mrs. Framel

"I was lonecome," she exulained as she followed her daughter-in-law into the parlor, "so I just packed up some mines pies and some Jellies I'd made and brought them alone. I guess Frank will like one of his mother's pies for Christmas, though I will admit that you do beat me on your crusts, my dear. Now give me an apron and I'll help you with the turker.

When the family cane into the disting room she supposed, of course, that her bushand had explained, and so made no comment when the old lady set aside her thick vegetable soup with the comment that she never did like those new-fungled soups.

But when the turkey was brought in and set upon the table the old halp brightened up.

For an instant Frank went a sickly white.

"Don't eat carrion," repeated his mother, as she aliced a bit from the strange mixture. "You eat this sort of stuff instead?"

"The pure product of Mother Nature, of the green fields and the healthful sunshine," said her son solombly "The last time I was here you were chewing your food like a own chews lis cult" remarked the old half severely. "Yes, mother," he assented, limply.

"Then, go get your hat. It's Frankie's birthright."
